

Less screen time

Children may over-eat or under-eat because they are not paying attention to when they are full or not.

Better meal times

Having meal times without screens helps children to know when they are full and improves their social, language and communication skills.